Stripe

Program Manager, Intake & Portfolio Management

21 May 2026

Dear Stripe team,

Last year I built an intake workflow on n8n that reduced my direct coordination overhead by roughly 60%. Multi-step form, condition routing based on request type, resource provisioning guide, automated notification. Non-technical researchers at Windesheim self-serve through it daily, with zero IT support behind it. That workflow is a small-scale version of exactly what this role describes: design a system that manages incoming demand, routes it intelligently, and makes the portfolio visible to everyone who needs to see it.

The portfolio management layer is documented across the career. I ran eight interdependent course workstreams through a pandemic restructure at Windesheim - mapped dependencies, defined milestones, ran weekly program-level reviews, and kept all eight delivered on schedule. At COTIT, I designed a Kanban-based intake with capacity ceilings per workstream for a logistics startup with no prior process structure. At the lab level I have always been the person who builds the system that tracks the system.

One honest gap to name: the JD lists two-plus years in HR or People operations as a requirement. My background is research operations, innovation labs, and education programs. The information architecture skills are the same. The HR context is not my track record.

I would also want to confirm: is this role open to EU-based remote workers? Stripe's Netherlands entity is one reason I am applying.

Kind regards,

Christiaan Verhoef
